rpm receives 'Platinum' status from ACCA for trainee and professional development

ACCA, the global body for professional accountants, has once again awarded pensions administrator rpm with the highest possible level of 'Approved Employer' status in the areas of trainee and professional development, in recognition of rpm's continued commitment to nurturing talent.

This is the fourth consecutive year rpm has successfully held this status and reflects the company's substantial investment in its workforce.

The award demonstrates that rpm provides learning opportunities for its employees working towards accounting and financial management qualifications, and for existing ACCA members to support their Continuing Professional Development.

There are three levels of approval – silver, gold and platinum.

Susan Greaves, Business Relationship Manager ACCA UK praised the company, saying: "rpm joins a select club of organisations who have reached the highest standards of support for their finance employees, endorsed by ACCA. The provision of comprehensive training and development is now as important as it has ever been. Finance professionals have a central role in ensuring the sustainability of their businesses. Therefore, I am delighted that rpm has gained this prestigious award" rpm's Finance Director David Teasdale welcomed the award, saying: "we have some very talented people at rpm with bright futures ahead of them and by investing in their future potential, rpm and all our clients will benefit."

rpm has grown its workforce by 36% since 2008 as it continues to expand its portfolio of third party pensions administration clients.
