Amey Trustees appoint RPMI as administrator for schemes

Pensions Administrator RPMI has been appointed by the Trustee board of Amey, one of the UK's leading public service providers, as administrator for two of its pension schemes.

RPMI were appointed by the Trustee board at the beginning of the year to administer their OS scheme. The professional approach to the implementation and service delivery shown by RPMI was recognised by the board who then awarded the company the contract for a second pension scheme in July.

Robert Branagh, Managing Director, Administration for RPMI said “this is a significant business win for RPMI and we are very proud to be administering these pension schemes for Amey. This appointment is a testament to the professionalism of our staff and the passion they have for delivering services centred around our clients and their members. It is also a strong illustration of our desire to grow in a measured way by working with businesses and schemes who share a similar culture and values around quality and service”.

Keith Sexton of Amey trustees also commented on the appointment “the decision for us to move our pension scheme administration from the incumbent was made easy by RPMI’s demonstration of their dedication to providing a first class service to our members. The way the company seamlessly dealt with the implementation of our first scheme enabled us to comfortably award them with the second, larger scheme. We look forward to working with the company in the future and continuing to develop our partnership”.
