Top Award win for RPMI Administration

Pensions Administrator, RPMI has been awarded one of the top accolades at the recent Financial Times UK Pension and Investment Provider awards; scooping the Third Party Administration award.

This recognition at the leading awards, which are judged by a number of leading professionals from across the pensions industry, further demonstrates the quality of the scheme administration solutions RPMI provides to all of its clients and the company's commitment to providing the highest quality services to the pensions industry.

RPMI have continued to grow their administration business over recent years and have seen an 11% increase in their staff numbers in the last 18 months since the organisation was restructured, leading to the creation of a dedicated business unit for scheme administration in order to support future growth.

The judges praised RPMI for their innovation, dedication to providing the highest service levels and a commitment to enhancing the experience of pension scheme members.

Robert Branagh, Managing Director for Administration said "This award is a testament to the hard work and dedication of all of our staff. We are extremely proud to win this award and receive industry recognition for the services we offer to all of our clients.

"We will continue to develop our quality people and services within RPMI and look forward to continued success in the future".
